

WASHINGTON IN WAR

MILITARY DEEDS THAT PROVE HIS BREADTH AND GENIUS.

He Knew the Temper of the Revolutionist—Was the Leader of the People in the Crisis of the Conflict—Never Lost an Army.

WASHINGTON the soldier was entirely another being from Washington the patrician, whose noble manners and lofty purposes drew out the reverence of the American people. He was the gentleman in camp and on horseback, of course, but the gentleman with the native nonsense taken out of him by contact with the rough side of life. Like one of the modern blue bloods translated from Oxford or Harvard to the wild scenes of the plains, he had learned before called to the high command to respect men for manhood alone, for physical strength and courage, for loyalty and endurance. Braddock despised the Virginia provincials whom Washington, then a young staff officer, proposed to throw around the ambushed army at Monongahela for a defense. But Washington knew his men and knew the value of bush fighting in that border warfare. He saved the haughty English from total massacre. So, later, the British officers despised the ragged and unmilitary rebels who dared stand before the trained battalions of Europe. Washington had served with British officers and had learned to estimate the prowess of British troops. His faith in the ultimate triumph of the rebels was practical, not sentimental. He won the fight by hard work, not by luck, nor yet by the favor of the gods.

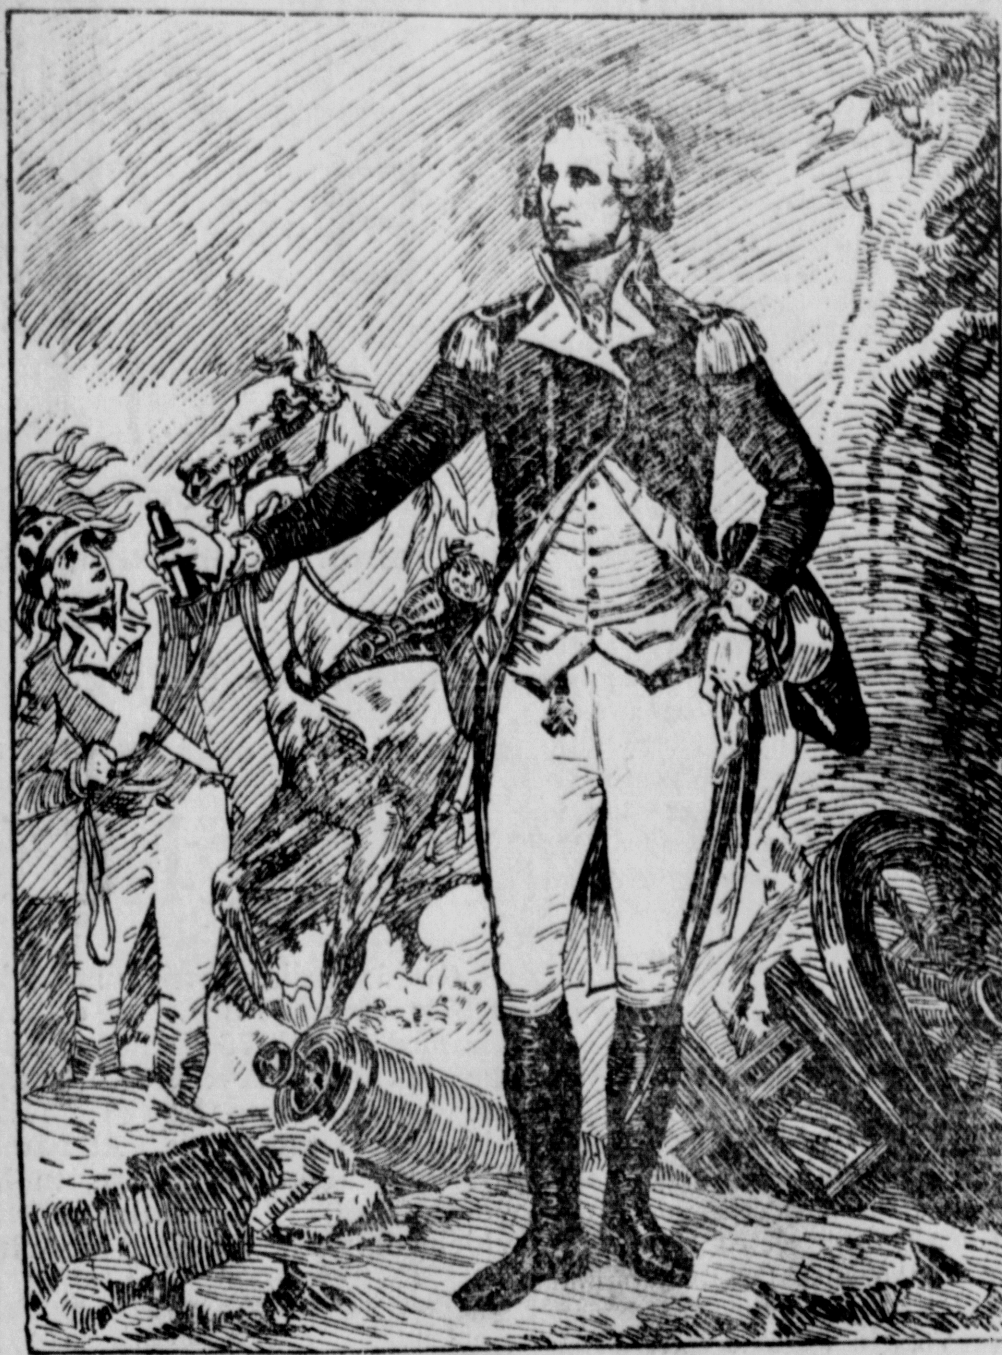

When Virginia was discussing what she should do to assist Boston in her fight with the British, Colonel Washington said, "If need be, I will raise 1,000 men, subsist them at my own expense and march them to the relief of Boston." He had in mind the mountaineers and hunters of the Virginia borders, whom he knew and who knew him. When Patrick Henry uttered before the continental congress the burning appeal ending with the words, "Give me liberty or give me death,"

Washington stood calmly by, dressed in his uniform of colonel, with his sword buckled on ready to march at the word.

It was a bold hand that the Virginia colonel put to the task of making soldiers out of militia and minutemen. The troops at Cambridge were chiefly New Englanders, who were rebels against all authority as smacking of kingly rule. He gave them to understand that the war was not to be simply a holiday of thrashing the hated redcoats, but a long struggle, where patriotism and loyalty must be tried in the fire. Incompetent and dishonest officers were cashiered, although they had been elected by the men. His firmness and habit of order drew the admiration of the best element, and he found such New Englanders as Stark, the Green mountain ranger; Putnam, the Connecticut farmer and Greene, the studious Rhode Island mechanic, ready to stand by every act for the discipline of the army.

Washington's first campaign, the siege of Boston, was attended with all manner of difficulties. He had to create a navy to cope with British ships, to satisfy the stay at home counselors of the colonies, who, like most stay at homes, were full of fight, and more than once found his plans thwarted by a council of his chief officers upon whom he depended to lead in attacks. Meanwhile the commander was busy with grand strategy. He sent Arnold and Montgomery to Canada, a brilliant move, but one that came to disaster through the untimely death of Montgomery and the wounding of Arnold. At the end of six months, three of them winter months at that, from the time he had an army fit for action Boston was clear of the British for good.

After Boston the points of importance were Philadelphia and New York, both more exposed to naval attacks than Boston, the cradle of the rebellion. The colonies had next to no navy, and Washington entered upon a defensive warfare to keep the British on the coast and prolong the struggle until the enemy was worn out or outside help should come. Bringing the army to New York, Washington yielded nothing without a fight, but at the same time saved his strength for better purposes than the attempt to defend untenable ground. New York was bound to fall to the British, but he saw to it that it was not made a base for operations in the Hudson river valley, which would cut the colonies in two. He fought some lively battles, or skirmishes rather, which raised the hopes of his soldiers and of the colonial people. The rebels could stand before the redcoats one to five and give a good account of themselves. West Point was made a bulwark against British advance up the Hudson.

So far Washington had clung to the defensive in his new field. Next he entered upon a double line of strategy—to hold on to New England while keeping the British from controlling New Jersey and the Delaware river as a new base for cutting the colonies in two. With but 3,000 poorly clad and half starved troops he took position in Pennsylvania behind the Delaware, in December, 1776. General Charles Lee, the second in command, had a larger army in the field, but refused to co-operate with Washington. Congress abandoned Philadelphia and appointed Washington dictator. Lee was captured while sleeping far outside his lines, and these events raised Washington upon a pedestal in the eyes of the soldiers and the people. The military power of the Revolution centered in him. There soon followed the brilliant stroke at Trenton and Princeton. In these affairs he took the greatest chances, and both were nearly lost by the failures of his combinations, the most delicate plans in war. But Washington came out of them victorious by the display of the highest courage. His tactics at Trenton and Princeton, as well as at the Brandywine and Germantown in the same field, are open to criticism, but in each case the situation called for action and Washington was forced to risk much upon the fidelity and ability of his generals. The net result of the Trenton and Princeton campaign was to free New Jersey of the British, except the northeast corner, and save Philadelphia for a time.

Washington settled down for the winter at Morristown with only 1,000 long service troops, but when spring opened in 1777 he had an army of 7,000 under able generals. The British divided the attention of the revolutionists by moving on Philadelphia from the Chesapeake bay and from Canada down Lake Champlain toward Albany. For defense of the north Washington sent Daniel Morgan and his Virginia riflemen to Albany and appealed to the New York and New England patriots to arise and meet the invader. With his own army he kept Howe occupied around Philadelphia, although he lost the battle of Brandywine and Germantown. After the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga he asked for the continental troops serving with the army there under Gates to come to his aid in securing the forts on the Delaware, and thus cut Howe off from direct communications with the sea. They were not sent, and the Delaware line was lost. Washington went into camp at Valley Forge. He had been the victim of a base conspiracy to undermine his power, but kept up his own spirit and that of his men during that trying time by looking for aid from France. Lafayette had joined him at Philadelphia, and during the winter the treaty of alliance was signed.

Early in the spring General Howe resigned the British command at Philadelphia, and his successor, Clinton, evacuated the city, taking the army to New York. Seeing a chance to cripple the British on the march, Washington planned an attack at Monmouth and was robbed of a brilliant victory by the treachery of Charles Lee, who had returned from captivity to his command. In that battle Washington displayed again the qualities of a fighting general. Like Napoleon, he dashed to the front to cheer on and direct his men. At the same time he did not give way to battle frenzy, although he lost his temper over the contemptible conduct of Lee. Lafayette proved a hero, boy that he was.

While the alliance with France came in good time to cheer on the revolutionists, it increased the difficulties of the commander in chief. Without the French navy there was little hope of success, but the French admirals had their own views of the plan of action. Furthermore, the revolutionists expected too much of the French, and another task was laid upon Washington's shoulders—to keep his people to their work. Besides planning campaigns he was forced to do the work of a national leader, a leader bearing upon his sword the fate of the country. The campaigns undertaken by the French were failures, and the British gained territory on the coast. Finally Washington asked Lafayette to go to France and secure a fleet and an army which should be under his own direction. It arrived at Newport in the summer of 1780, and while Washington was there conferring with the French leaders Arnold plotted the base treason which was to give his commander another cruel blow. He had trusted the brilliant soldier of Quebec and Saratoga and given him that opportunity to betray the citadel of the Hudson valley.

But the nerve of the warrior leader was not to be shaken now that the hour had come for a decisive blow. The troops of Rochambeau united with the continental forces gave him for the first time in the war an army. The fleet also gave the needed sea power to attack where the British were strongest, along the coast. The main British army was in the south under Cornwallis. Washington sent Greene to the south with orders not to fight for positions, but to draw Cornwallis northward. Morgan was also in the south with his Virginians. Both these brilliant soldiers, the mountaineer and the blacksmith, had been driven from the service by the ingratitude of congress, but Washington's appeal caused them to buckle on their swords for the last cast. Lafayette was sent to Virginia with an army, and after many a useless chase Cornwallis retired to the seaboard at Yorktown.

Washington left strong garrisons on the Hudson, and with about 7,000 soldiers threatened to attack New York. He hovered within striking distance, gradually moving southward, and reaching New Brunswick made a forced march to the head of the Chesapeake. By water the army was transported to the York, and with the aid of the French fleet and the troops on shipboard the allies laid siege to Yorktown. They outnumbered the British, and re-enforcements for Cornwallis were cut off by the French ships. Yorktown fell, a triumph of strategy. Washington struck the enemy where he was weak with the most men, but it was only by the most skillful planning that he caught his enemy in position favorable for the blow.

The result showed Washington's genius in holding on to New Jersey and while risking all to keep the enemy

near the seaboard preserving an open road between the Hudson and the south. He was always within reach of the Hudson and of Maryland and Virginia. His army at its best was never the equal of the British in numbers had they been brought into action. Often they had 20,000 to 30,000 in New York, while Washington stood ward outside with less than 5,000.

To compare Washington with the great generals of modern times would be unjust to him. He hadn't the army for great battles. He waged a long and tedious warfare for national existence, and although rarely victorious he was never driven to the wall. He was a pioneer soldier, leading motley and temporary bands of pioneers against an old and strong military power.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

Washington at Forty-three.

George Washington was 43 when he drew his sword under the historic elm at Cambridge as "captain general and commander in chief" of the colonial forces. He was just the age of Julius Caesar when he took command of the army in Gaul, of Napoleon when he made the mistake of his life and started in to conquer Russia, and he was ten years older than Alexander was when he wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. Charlemagne was just his age when he overcame Wittikind, the Saxon chief, and made all Germany Christian, and the "captain general of the continentals" was just as old as was Constantine when he determined to make himself master of the world. He was as old as Sesostris, the pharaoh, when he conquered the Hittites and persecuted the children of Israel; as Hannibal when he gave up the hope of conquering Rome and left Italy to defend Carthage against Scipio.

Washington's Room.

Silent we stand beside the open door,
And all the room beyond is bathed in light—
The golden sunlight thou didst hail of yore,
Thine smile that kissed away the tears of night
And in its touch God's daily promise bore
A benediction that put care to flight
And gave thee strength to face the world—aye,
more,
That lit thy pathway, guiding thee aright.
How many dawns thou didst to care awake,
Each dawn attended with new hopes and fears;
Forever faithful didst thy burden take,
Praying that peace might bless the unborn years,
And for thy country and thy kindred's sake
Toiled with a patience that all earth reveres!
How many nights thy heart did well nigh break
To know thy motherland was drenched with tears!
And it was here thou didst at last find rest—
The work was done, the time had come to sleep—
The high, the humble, prosperous, oppressed,
One in their sorrow o'er thy couch did weep.
Our ceaseless gratitude by tongues professed,
But in our hearts there lieth still more deep
A love which with our deeds we would attest
To prove us worthy of the trust we keep.
—Ruth Lawrence in "Colonial Verses."

A Washington and Jefferson Anecdote.

Sir John Macdonald, the first prime minister of Canada, was fond of relating this story to illustrate the need of an upper house:

"Of what use is the senate?" asked Jefferson as he stood before the fire with a cup of tea in his hand, pouring the tea into the saucer.

"You have answered your own question," replied Washington.

"What do you mean?"

"Why do you pour that tea into the saucer?"

"To cool it."

Power in Portrayal.

"Why, man, I've had whole audiences fall to their knees in terror at my description of the day of judgment."

The other exhorter smiled pityingly. "Ah, yes!" he replied. "But the other night I portrayed the destruction of the world with such power that a man came up after the services and asked me whom he should see about the kinetoscope tights."—Detroit Journal.

Economical.

"A good many people," said the philosopher, "are economical after the manner of a man I once knew, who smoked 30 cent cigars and saved the half burned matches to kindle the fires."

HE WAS A BORN LEADER.

Interesting Reminiscences of One of Washington's Comrades in Arms.

"Washington had the stuff in him and the kind of mind that enable a man to govern and influence other men," said General William O. Butler, a son of one of the four famous "fighting Butlers" of the Revolution, himself a major general in the Mexican war and a candidate for the vice presidency who barely missed being elected. "My father knew General Washington as intimately as did any of his staff," said General Butler in 1865.

"He always said that General Washington possessed more of the qualities that go to make up a great man than any of the leading figures of the Revolution. Greene came next to Washington, he thought, in force and ability. No other man could have done what he did. Modern historians have but little idea of the difficulties Washington experienced. Outside of his position as general in chief there were so many things to worry and annoy him. The chief military trouble was with his own intimate friends, relating to questions of rank. Especially difficult was General Washington's position when Lafayette came to our aid, and congress, as you know, made him a major general at once. This action greatly offended the older officers, hot headed fellows, sturdy, dashing fighters—generals of brigades, and colonels who had made the continental line what it was—and yet they had to take their orders from a man but 23 years of age, who had never been under fire and was even unable at first to communicate with his officers except through an interpreter."

"In the pacification of these officers General Washington showed the greatest tact," said General Butler. "Yes, gentlemen," he said to them, "it is true that Lafayette is but 23, that he was made a major general by congress upon my recommendation. What else could I do? He brought us 12,000 stand of the best muskets Europe could produce' (the French musket of that day weighed 9 pounds, was very carefully made, had a particularly good lock, while the English fire lock weighed 11 pounds, and its lock was clumsy, badly fitted and very prone to miss fire) 'and 5,000 sabers, 2,000 pairs of military pistols and bits for bridles, and the stirrups and other iron-work for saddles, besides 1,800 cavalry carbines or musketoons. Without these arms we could never have equipped our army. Then he brought and caused to be sent to us about $500,000 in gold. It is not too much to say that but for Lafayette's aid just at the time it came our army must have been disbanded for want of equipment and arms."

A Relic of Washington's Time.

At the foot of Ward's heroic statue of Washington on the high steps of the subterranean building is a broad piece of stone carefully covered with a wire grating. It is so placed that should the image of the immortal Father of His Country come to life and step down from his lofty pedestal he would stand on the same spot where occurred the crowning triumph of his career. Through the protecting grating can be read the following dim inscription, "Standing on this stone, in the balcony of Federal hall, April 30, 1789, George Washington took the oath as first president of the United States of America." When old Federal hall was demolished, the sacred stone was carefully preserved, and it now occupies as nearly as possible the same position as before. Few people have ever noticed it on the high base of the statue, where it is fittingly placed as one of the relics of the nation's birth.

Italy's Young Novelist.

Gabriele d'Annunzio is only 32, but looks older. The features are worn and thoughtful. The Italian playwright believes in his mission, which is in brief the propagation of joy in life. Signor d'Annunzio has been described in consequence of his recent election to the Italian chamber as the deputy for "Beauty." He is about to found a theater at Albano, the object of which is to make that pretty lake town the Baureith of Italy.—Landon Chronicle.

Prisoner Tied His Guard to a Buggy.

Not long ago James Morgan, charged with forgery, was arrested at Muncie, Ind., by Deputy Sheriff James of Newcastle. While being brought to Muncie Morgan managed to unlock the handcuffs and fastened the deputy to his buggy and then disappeared. Morgan made his escape, and the officers over the country have been looking for him ever since.—Columbus (O.) Post.

The Real Difficulty.

"The trouble with you," said Mr. Ruffedge's wife, after a warm debate, "is that you are a confirmed dyspeptic." "No, my dear," was the answer. "That's not correct. The trouble with me is that I am a contradicted dyspeptic."—Washington Star.

NAVAL INQUIRY BEGUN TODAY.

From the Mine.

BARNETT'S SIGNIFICANT TALK.

He Says 95 Chances Out of 100 Investigation Will Show That the Forward
Magazine of the Maine Did Not Blow
Up First, if at All, and Was Not the Cause of the Terrible Disaster—Expert
Divers at Work Examining the Wreck.
Dangerous Task They Are Performing.
Naval Officers In Washington, Who
Have Seen Pictures of the Wreck, Said
to Be Under the Impression That a Boiler Exploded—European Diplomats
Expect War—Important News of the Great Catastrophe.

HAVANA, Feb. 21.—The naval court
of inquiry appointed to investigate the Maine disaster began its work here today.

Lieutenant Commander Barnett of
the survey boat Bache said to a correspondent:

You want the facts. I can tell you
there are 95 chances out of 100 that investigation will show that the forward
magazine of the Maine did not blow up
first, if it exploded at all, and that it was not the cause of the terrific consequences that followed. The condition of the wreck when first studied and a later careful scrutiny make this an almost absolute certainty.

No American in Havana doubts now
that the Maine was torn to pieces by a submarine mine, though the forms and
conditions prevent the officers from so
stating publicly.

Spanish divers will be beside the United States government divers in the
inspection of the hull of the Maine,
through the courtesy of Captain Sigsbee. The next question is whether there will be the return courtesy of permitting the American divers to examine the floor of the bay between the
wreck and the shore for traces of an electric wire or cable that may have fired the mine.

It is generally supposed that a request
for such a privilege will have the immediate effect of putting the government
on its dignity, and that it will be regarded as an insult to Spain.

It is probable that if the mine was
fired by a wire from the shore the wire
has been pulled in before now, though
there is no certainty that traces are not left.

Captain Sigsbee believes the investigation by his board will be completed in
three days and the results laid before
the court of inquiry.

Havana is delirious with joy. The carnival has begun.

The fear of the Spanish officials is
that as the festival that nearly approaches an orgy, the masks will be cast
aside, and that there will be an exhibition of the hatred against America.

Circulars exulting in the sinking of
the Maine have been distributed among
the revelers. The civility usually shown Americans in the street is greatly diminished. The disguise is so thin now that it would be but a step to insult and attack.

So far it has stopped with verbal abuse
and hisses, but a serious anti-American
outbreak is quite within the possibilities of the near future. This feeling is made more intense by the tidings that another American warship is to be sent here.

The high class divers also commenced
work today. The ordinary seaman
divers worked about the wreck yester-
day.

The statement relative to high-class
divers is explained as no reflection upon
the men now engaged in the work, they being enlisted men belonging to the navy. It is the practice on board of
men-of-war to assign a few men, always
volunteers, on account of the hazardous
nature of the work, to duty as divers,
in connection with their regular work.
The scope of their work is the exploration of the ship's bottom generally, the disentanglement of cables from the
propeller shafts and sometimes the
search for a lost torpedo or anchor.
Such work rarely carries them deeper
than 25 feet into the water and it is said
that for operations in deeper water,
such as would be involved in examination of the Maine's bottom, their training has not fitted them.

They are also lacking in that kind of
skill necessary to enable a diver to grope
his way safely through the internal
parts of a mighty ship like the Maine,
torn and dismembered as she is, and
this work is highly dangerous. Creeping through iron-bound passages and groping for the doors of the numerous
watertight bulkheads which divide the
hull into many compartments, on slimy
floors and in perfect darkness requires
the highest expert skill, and that is why Captain Sigsbee with only his sailor
divers at command had not been able
to do much so far toward unraveling
the mystery of the Maine's untimely
end.

WRECKED BY A BOILER.

graphs, Think a Boiler Explosion
Caused the Disaster to the Maine—Sobrial Not Now a Responsible Critic.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The newspaper reproductions of photographs
taken of the wreck have been studied
with much interest by the naval officers
here. Great surprise was expressed at the extent of the wreck and the vast
mass of steel and iron heaped in the
forward part of the ship was a particular object of attention. The experts
who had first ventured the theory of a
bursting boiler as the cause of the destruction claim to find strong reinforcement in the pictures for that belief.
The great mass of metal appears to be thrown up over the boiler space and not
over the forward magazine, while the
forcing apart of the forward body of
the hull, they say, might have been accomplished by the enormous expansive
power of the high pressure steam carried in these boilers, with their shells
more than an inch thick. As to what caused a boiler to explode; whether a disguised bomb in the coal, low water
or faulty construction, they do not now
undertake to say.

When Secretary Long's attention was called to reports that he had taken official cognizance of the criticisms of the American navy by the Spanish Captain
Sobral, the secretary said that he had
called the subject to the attention of
the state department, with a view of
having an inquiry made by that branch.
The particular expression to which the
secretary had directed the attention of
the state department was the following,
attributed to Captain Sobral:

"It was the result of an explosion
inside of the ship, which took place in one of the forward magazines. The fact of the matter is that the discipline
and watch observed on the ship were
very lax. This, as one English newspaper declared the other day, is the case
on American warships generally. This sort of thing has occurred on previous
occasions on American war vessels."

The secretary said that he had not
called attention to those other features
of Captain Sobral's alleged interview,
in which he refers to the possibilities of
war and to the information he had
gained while naval attache of the Spanish legation.

As a whole Mr. Long did not treat
the Sobral matter as profoundly serious.

Assistant Secretary Day would not discuss the Sobral matter. It is understood, however, that the state department does not attach deep significance
to the reported remarks of Sobral,
owing to his minor position. At the same time it is felt that he should not
be making such remarks as are attributed to him.

As Secretary Long has called official
attention to them, the department
would doubtless take steps to learn
whether the interview was accurate by
making a request on the Spanish legation. It can be stated positively, however, that reports that the state department made such a request of the Spanish legation are incorrect. Nothing has been done thus far, and an unexpected
development so changes the aspect of
the Sobral case that the state department may not feel that it is necessary to proceed further.

This development was that Captain
Sobral's services as naval attache at Washington were officially terminated
by Spain about four weeks ago. It came from Senor Du Bosce, charge d'affaires
of the Spanish legation, who, when his
attention was called to the Sobral case,
gave the following authorized statement:

"As regards this reported interview,
I know nothing about it, beyond what I have seen in the papers. I should imagine Mr. Sobral far too prudent to
say anything calculated to offend brothers in arms. At the same time, I should state that on Jan. 24 last Captain Sobral ceased to be a member of this
legation, according to royal decrees,
which gazetted as his successor Lieutenant Ramon Carraza y Regura."

Owing to the royal decree relieving
Captain Sobral, it is said, he at present
occupies the position merely of a private citizen. He is at present in New York,
meeting his old naval friends on the Vizcaya, but his official status as Spain's naval attache to the legation is
said to have terminated when the decree
was gazetted last month. It is a usual
formality to notify the department of
such a change, but owing to the exciting events of recent days this notification of the Spanish decree was not conveyed to the authorities here at the time
it occurred.

THE PURCHASE OF CUBA.

Porter Affirms This as the President's
Plan For the Insurgents.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.—The Inquirer today prints, under a Washington date, a lengthy dispatch from Robert P. Porter, ex-superintendent of census, giving what he believes to be the policy of the administration regarding Cuba. Mr. Porter thinks that Spain
shall be asked to allow the Cubans to purchase their liberty by the issuance of Cuban bonds, this government to assume the responsibility of collecting the
customs duties and thus see that the
revenues of the government are applied
to the payment of the interest on the bonds.

Concerning the Maine disaster, Mr.
Porter says there is little doubt that she
was blown up from without, "but it will be difficult to fasten guilt upon the Spanish authorities."

He confesses that the situation is critical and that the coming week may

The Weather.

WAS NOT AN ACCIDENT

They Do Not Happen on American Men-of-War.

DISCIPLINE IS FAR TOO GOOD

C. A. Chute, Who Served Seven Years In the Navy, Has an Opinion Regarding the Destruction of the Maine, but Does Not Explain It.

C. A. Chute, superintendent of the mechanical department of the Brunt Porcelain works, does not believe the
man-of-war Maine was blown up by accident, nor does he think that any
breach of discipline on the part of officers or crew was responsible for the disaster.

Mr. Chute served for seven years in the navy, and knows that every man
has his duty and performs it. Neglect
is never excused, and carelessness on one
of the big machine shops, such as the
battle ships really are, is very rarely
found.

Although Mr. Chute knows the Spanish character he does not attempt to explain the unfortunate happening in Havana harbor, but he is confident that
the investigation will not convict American officers and men of carelessness.

MISS GILMORE'S BROTHER

Welcomed the Officers and Crew of the Vizcaya.

Miss Gilmore, who resides at the home of her relative, Harvey Martin, in East End, was in receipt of pleasant
news last week when she learned that
her brother, Commander Fernando Gil-
more, had been delegated by Admiral Bunce, of the Brooklyn navy yard, to receive the officers of the Spanish man-
of-war Vizcaya when it entered New York harbor.

Commander Gilmore formerly resided
in Steubenville, and since entering the
navy has won for himself a splendid
place. He is well known to a number
of persons in this city, and Steubenville
is still proud to claim him as its own.

THE WAR SPIRIT

Has Made Its Appearance In and Near the City.

The war spirit has made its appearance in the city, and even the small
boys have become excited.

The other day a number assembled in
the western part of Sixth street, and
under the leadership of one of their number fought all kinds of battles with imaginary Spaniards. In West Market street a crowd set upon a companion, and was making it very
warm for him when a lady appeared
and put an end to the conflict. In explanation of their conduct, they said
he was a Spaniard and they were playing war.

"Old St. Clair will maintain the reputation it gained in the early days of the Rebellion should the president call for
troops," said a well known resident of Calcutta to the NEWS REVIEW. "The people are not unreasonable nor excited,
but they sent a good many brave boys
to the front when Lincoln called on the country, and they will do it again. I have heard the talk since the news of
the Maine affair came, and I believe a
company could be recruited in a short
time. The man who is not patriotic

COLUMBIANA COUNTY VETERANS.

All Resident Old Soldiers Are Deeply Interested.

The soldiers of Columbiana county,
all old veterans, members of the G. A.
R. or otherwise, should, if possible, attend the convention to be held tomorrow,
Tuesday, Feb. 22, at G. A. R. hall,
Wellsville, for the purpose of organizing the "Columbian County Veteran association." The object is to effect an organization, elect officers, etc., and to make arrangements for a grand rally in
the near future.

Aroused the Neighbors.

Saturday night a family row occurred
in Third street about 12 o'clock. The
neighbors were awakened by the loud
talking, and heard one man threaten to shoot another if he found him loafing
around his house again.

The wordy war was continued for
some time but no blows were struck.

Will Be Married Tomorrow.

Levi O. Jones, manager of the decorating department of the Akron China
company, and Miss Lizzie Specht, of
this city, will be united in marriage tomorrow evening at the residence of the bride's parents in Elm street. They have many friends here.

Rev Swift Believes In Christians
In Politics.

The Pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church Believes That the Christian Men and Women of East Liverpool Should Do Heroic Battle In Municipal Government' Jettings From Other Churches.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Reverend Swift took the above as his topic on Sunday morning and delivered a sermon which went home to the hearts of attentive hearers; a sermon richly freighted with practical Christianity—the Christianity which fits humanity not only for Sunday and church service, but for everyday life and action. The reverend gentleman deprecated the so-called Christianity which spends all its time within narrow church walls, and which fails to come in vital contact and touch with the surging ranks of human life all around and about—the world at large, the members of which so much stand in need of the vitalizing power of the Holy Spirit, as exemplified in human hearts and lives, instrumentalities which the mighty God-Father uses for the accomplishment of his purposes. Reverend Swift believes that the true Christian men and women of this city and of the nation should be deeply interested in good government and the enforcement of the laws and ordinances. He believes that good and true men should not only be in politics, but of politics; battling for the right and the true and compelling the retirement of the false and the evil. East Liverpool sadly needs a concentration of such thoughts and ideas as the pastor of the Methodist Protestant church yesterday enunciated; and out of such concentration of thought must come concentration and unity of action, in favor of clean and good government. Bad and wicked men are in the minority in East Liverpool; but they have been controlling municipal affairs and ruling the majority of the better class of voters and citizens, simply because they are UNITED in their base work, and because the better class are DISUNITED, and therefore become the victims of the law-breaking and law-defying class. Christian men must awaken to the fact that cause and effect are just as sure as death. If good men fail to unite and plant the seed of good government, then, as truly as God reigns and rules, the rising generation will gather the harvest of outraged law, and garner sin, shame depravity and death—death for time and for eternity. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Second M. E. Church.

The wonderful revival services that have been conducted at the Second M. E. church have been brought to a close. Communion services were observed yesterday, Doctor Jackson, presiding elder, being present.

First Presbyterian.

In spite of the weather the usual large congregation assembled at the First Presbyterian church last night to hear Doctor Lee tell the story of a hymn. "Let the Lower Lights be Burning," was the composition in question. The gentleman delivered a strong sermon from the subject, "A Death Scene Repentance."

Christian Church.

The Knights of Pythias attended the Christian church yesterday morning as an organization. Reverend Pike, for his subject took the motto of the organization, "friendship, charity and benevolence," and delivered a splendid sermon, pointing out the possibilities for good when a great body of men were bound together under these principles. Two persons were admitted to membership by letter.

In Other Churches.

Reverend Weary preached to an interested congregation at St. Stephen's Episcopal church. The talk on "Hypocrisy" at the after meeting in the evening was especially good.

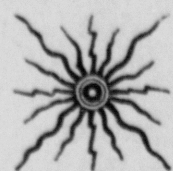

Rev. J. G. Reinartz occupied the pulpit at the Lutheran church yesterday. The English services in the evening were well attended, and the gentleman preached a good sermon from the subject "Love founded upon knowledge and exercised in judgment."

Doctor Taggart preached to a large congregation at the First U. P. church yesterday morning, and in the evening the pulpit was occupied by Mr. Martin, of the Allegheny seminary. The gen-

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., MONDAY, FEB 21.

If this government simply shows to Spain that it will not be bulldozed, the Spanish ministry will change its policy.

TOMORROW being a legal holiday there will be no issue of the NEWS REVIEW. Read Wednesday evening's paper for all the news.

THERE must be some solution for the contract prison labor question which will put an end to further controversy. While it is true that statesmen have wrestled with the matter in vain, and all remedies proposed have failed to answer the purpose, there is certainly a happy medium patiently waiting a discoverer.

NOTHING official in the Maine matter will be known until the board has had ample time for investigation. If it was an accident the responsible parties will be court-martialed, and if it was design Spain will be called upon to pay the bill presented by this government. Thus will the catastrophe be kept constantly before the people until it is settled.

IN marked contrast to the silence of Americans in official position, regarding the sinking of the Maine, are the bitter words of Commander Sobral, an attache of the Spanish legation. He scoffs at the idea of war, and poorly conceals the contempt he feels for the American navy, declaring that carelessness, and carelessness alone, is responsible for the awful happening.

It is gratifying to note that the song birds of Ohio are not to be given over to the pot hunter. The legislature refused the other day to pass a bill protecting them, but it has developed that they are to be included in the bill now being prepared by the game and fish commission, and will be attended to when that comes before the house. Birds look well on ladies' hats, but they look much better in the woods.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The celebration of the day which gave to the world the beautiful character of George Washington cannot but be a lesson in patriotism for old and young alike. Particularly can this be said of a time, when the sullen growlings of the dogs of war, have roused the American people to a full realization of the fact that the day may not be far distant when the nation will need many men to emulate the splendid example so nobly given by the father of his country.

THE CURFEW LAW.

The parties who are responsible for the enforcement of the laws and ordinances enacted by the council of this city, should be called upon to explain why the curfew measure has always been a dead letter. They should be compelled to give some reason for the manner in which it has been ignored by every policeman on the force.

The law was only passed after a severe struggle. Much influence was brought to bear upon members of council. That influence was not used as a joke. The parties who interested themselves in behalf of the children of this city did not do it with the expectation of living to see the result of their efforts made the laughing stock of every policeman in the pay of the town. They wanted to see the children cared for. They still want to see the city do its duty, and they are anxious to know why that is not done when the law specifically states that it shall be done.

Resigned.

C. H. Blazer, who has for some years been with the Metropolitan Insurance company, has resigned his position, and on Saturday retired from the service.

WELLSVILLE.

A FREE FERRY WANTED

Board of Trade Is Working on a Plan.

MR. JOHNSON WILLING TO SELL

Or to Lease to the Town--Arguments In Favor of a Change--Personal--Happenings at the Shops--All the News of Wellsville.

The board of trade is not winding up its business now that it has landed a few factories. Its next move will be the establishing of a free ferry or the leasing of the one now in operation from Watson Johnson. A proposition has been made to Mr. Johnson, who is in Florida, but no answer has yet been received.

The board argues that the ferry service is very poor, and many Virginia people go to Liverpool and cross the bridge rather than suffer the annoyance of waiting. If the canning factory is built, the service must be improved. Some definite announcement is expected very soon.

The Barnstormers.

"The Barnstormers" met in the council chamber Saturday night, and decided on the following cast for "The Mikado" which they expect to produce soon for the benefit of the base ball association.

Mikado.....Elmer Thayer
Nanki Poo.....Frank Kelley
Poo Bah.....Julius Goetz
Pish Lush.....James McQueen
Koko.....John Perkins
Yum Yum.....Miss Stewart
Peep Boo.....Mrs. W. F. Lones
Pitti Sing.....Miss Grace Parke
Katisha.....Mrs. C. B. Malone

A decidedly strong chorus of twenty voices was also secured. Although some trouble has been experienced in procuring a room with a piano, they hope to begin rehearsing this week. The fire department has already expressed their desire to have the next benefit, so "The Barnstormers" will no doubt be in great demand when they are thoroughly started and should have the hearty support of the progressive and amusement loving public.

Shop Notes.

Engine 603 was turned out today after receiving general repairs.

M. Gloss, who has been unable to work because of an accident to his hand, is again able to resume his duties.

John Turner, who has been ill, was able to return to work today.

Brakeman C. Johnson is on the sick list.

The shops will be closed tomorrow because of Washington's birthday.

After waiting for some time for material for repairs, engine 643 will today be placed in service on train 121.

Superintendent Scriven and staff will leave Euclid avenue tomorrow on an inspection trip.

C. W. Hall, of Ft. Wayne, has been appointed assistant foreman at the shops, and assumed his duties today.

Will Fulton stopped over a short time Saturday with friends, on his way to Steubenville, where he spent Sunday, returning on this morning's train to his home in Allegheny, Pa.

Miss Dottie Noragon, who has been ill, is better.

The News of Wellsville.

The Immaculate Conception church society will hold a social and supper at their hall tomorrow night. The physical culture class in connection with this society will give a dance and social to-night in Aten's hall.

The missionary societies of the First Presbyterian church held very interesting services at the church last evening. Papers were read by Mrs. R. A. Blair, Mrs. H. W. Lowry, Misses Mary Cope, Gertrude Everson, Jennie Dickson, Rena Davidson and Maude McGregor. Special music was a feature. Miss Minerva Ingram and Mrs. D. S. Brookman each sang a solo.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Broderick and John Ovington are attending the funeral of James Boyles, Summitville. The funeral took place at 9 o'clock this morning.

A large number of young men were called to Lisbon to answer questions asked by the grand jury.

THE GAME WAS GOING

When the Police Stepped In and Stopped It.

The police raided a poker joint in Market street Saturday night, and nine gamblers paid the mayor for their fun.

The raid was made by Officers Jennings and Finley, and the clocks has just sounded midnight when they entered a room above the Chinese laundry. Four men were at a table playing, and a number of others stood near. The officers informed them they were wanted, but three had slipped from the room before they could be rounded up and marched away.

At city hall they registered as Samuel Stone, Wellsville; Jake Swan, Calcutta; W. J. Miller, Smith's Ferry; John Stockman, N. Y.; W. Henderson, Rochester; L. Wimple, Joseph Linkerstein, J. Davis, J. S. Daugherty, city. Each was fined $6.60, and after paying was allowed to go. The names of those who got away are known, and they will be arrested as soon as found.

Mayor Gilbert had four offenders before him yesterday morning when the hearings were held, and as all paid or made arrangements to pay the city made $26.40.

The first to be heard was T. W. Thomas, of Wellsville. He was arrested in the Diamond by Officer Jennings for being drunk and disorderly. He was taken to jail in the patrol, and was fined $6.60 for his fun.

The next was Will Seever, of Chester. Will was drunk, and when seen in West Market street by Officer Jennings was told to go home. He began to tell the officer he knew his business, and what he expected to do, but he had not told his tale of woe when the patrol was on the scene, and another $6.60 was collected.

Robert Brown was drunk, and was fighting in Second street when Chief Johnson came along. He was placed under arrest and at the hearing was asked for $6.60.

The third run of the patrol was when Officer Woods captured George Parish in Broadway. George was very drunk and was taxed $6.60.

Several police calls were answered by the firemen Saturday evening, but no arrests resulted from any of them. Several crowds were dispersed, and a gang of boys in Sixth street were moved.

Attend Apple's Fire Sale.

Thirteen Club's 13 Cent Dinner.

The Thirteen club met a few nights ago at the Mills hotel in New York. Three hundred and thirty-eight members and guests sat around twelve 13 tables, 13 people at a table, and partook of a special 13 cent dinner, which was eaten in twelve 13 minutes. George Francis Train was toastmaster, and he read off a list of 13 times 13 places, streets, men and things, all spelled with 13 letters, just to show that there was no reason under the sun why 13 should be an unlucky number. --New York Sun.

WE BLOW OUR BUGLE

And the Notes Thereof Ring Merrily Forth.

A PLANT TO BE PROUD OF

The News Review Plant, Main Office and Job Department, in Splendid Shape—We Turn Out Fine Job Work, Equal to Any in the Land—Warm Commendation From the Right Source.

The plant of the NEWS REVIEW is incomparably superior to all would-be rival establishments in this section.

We never attempt to deceive the public. In the first place, such conduct is not honorable. In the next place, we believe firmly in the adage that "honesty is the best of policy." It will win in the long run. This is just as surely a fact as that "effect follows cause." When we tell you we have a "Pony Century Campbell Press," unsurpassed by any press in the land, we mean just what we say and believe, and the manufacturers of this press will back up the assertion, while thousands of delighted purchasers and users of the "Pony Century" will back the manufacturers up in their statement. When we assert that we own and operate a "perfecting press," just on the market, just invented, and a world beater, you can back up our assertion in every honorable manner, and you can be very certain that we will not invest in second hand goods, as such investments are ever and always to be avoided, if possible, and no wise business man, with money back of him, will attempt to compete against first-class equipment by and through an investment in second class material, which is dear at any price.

"Say, old man, that job work you turned out for us fills the bill. I'm more than pleased with it. I gave some work to the other office in town, and I'm sorry that I did it. In comparison with the work turned out for us by the NEWS REVIEW, the other work is simply botched up and unworthy of mention."

And if this testimonial is not strong enough, business men and manufacturers of East Liverpool, read the following respecting price lists, embossed work, and fine products turned out in the job department of the NEWS REVIEW. Our authority is one of the heaviest manufacturing potters in the city of East Liverpool:

"Captain Palmer, you are turning out splendid work for us. That is the best work we have had done in the printing line. You can say anything within the bounds of reason respecting its excellence, and attach my name to the commendation. Another feature is very satisfactory, and that is that your prices are very reasonable, and we have paid much higher prices for inferior work."

And then read this, oh ye business men and advertisers of East Liverpool, coming from the lips of one of the best judges in the country, a man whose business carries him all over the United States, and who inspected minutely every printing office in this city. And, for fear our would-be rivals will assert that we are blowing our bugle too strongly, and that we may not be keeping strictly within the line of facts, we will state that one of the most reliable and trustworthy business men of East Liverpool accompanied the stranger on his inspection of the NEWS REVIEW plant, and distinctly heard the words of commendation as follows:

"My dear sir, you have an elegant plant, and you have it in splendid condition. You are in much better shape than are your competitors. You are far in advance of the requirements of your city. I have traveled for years throughout Uncle Sam's domain, and I have inspected thousands of printing offices, and I can truthfully say that I have never yet found a printing office in better condition than is yours. Don't consider me a flatterer, sir, as I am stating

Royal makes the food pure, wholesome and delicious.

plain facts, and you have a right to be proud of your splendidly equipped and carefully looked after plant."

The manager of the NEWS REVIEW naturally felt proud over such glowing words of approval from such a source, and he is doing all he can to deserve them, and to deserve the good opinion and confidence of the citizens and business men of East Liverpool. We have splendid workmen in every department, sober, reliable, trustworthy and skillful; we have splendid presses, the best manufactured; we have thousands of dollars worth of the very latest and best approved type materials; we are constantly adding to our equipment, and we propose in the future, as in the past, to hold the lead in our craft in this splendid little city.

We have the exclusive right to the American Press association news in East Liverpool, and no rival can take this from us. We are in daily and hourly communication with New York city, and we receive any important telegraphic news or happenings occurring in this great nation, or in the civilized world, up to the hour of 4 o'clock p. m., each and every day in the year. We lead—our rivals follow. This is not bluster or bluff, but a plain statement of existing facts, and the solid truth contained therein maketh our local would-be rivals wince and growl in impotent wrath. Finally, oh ye advertisers, the DAILY NEWS REVIEW caters to the merchants of East Liverpool in preference to any other business men in the land, receives splendid patronage, and returns warm thanks to the men who appreciate such action on our part. Selah.

STRIKE AT THE SPECIALTY.

The Employees All Quit Today at Noon.

There is trouble at the Specialty glass works, and today at noon all the employees quit work. They will hold a meeting this evening. Few of the men will talk.

The statement made at the office is that Manager Gleis gave Henry Nanning, a presser, a week's notice, and his time was up Saturday night. This was followed at noon today by the strike.

The men have a different story. There has been friction since the new manager came, and it is claimed on one occasion that he was involved in a personal encounter with an employee.

The discharge of Nanning was followed by a meeting, and the factory committee called on the manager and asked a reason for his action. He gave none, and the men decided to quit. One of them stated today that this looked like the first move toward getting rid of the union men employed at the factory.

Manager Gleis was seen by a reporter but refused to talk.

Endorsing Officers.

SHERIFF GILL IS AFTER THEM

It Was Too Wet to Use the Bloodhounds. Common Pleas Court Convened This Morning and the Grand Jury Is Hard at Work—Several New Cases Filed.

LISBON, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Burglars on Saturday night entered a small building in Clarkson and stole furs to the value of $150. Sherman Pope, the owner, reported the matter to Sheriff Gill, Sunday morning, and he left at once for Clarkson with the bloodhounds. When he arrived there he found the weather would not permit him to use them. It is believed that something will develop soon.

IN COURT.

Common Pleas Convened on Time This Morning.

LISBON, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Common pleas court convened this morning, and the case of M. H. Hersha against the Liverpool street railway was dismissed for lack of prosecution, at the cost of the plaintiff.

The grand jury got down to work this morning, and the court house corridors are filled with witnesses. Many cases will be considered.

The case of W. G. McCollough against the Buckeye Brick company has been settled.

BRIDGE MATTER AGAIN.

A Motion Was Made to Take It to Another Court.

LISBON, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—A motion was made in court today to remove the case of the First National bank against John Shrader to the United States court, the claim being made that the parties are from different states.

W. C. Moore has sued Mary A. Barrett, of St. Clair township, to set aside a transfer of real estate alleged to have been made to prevent plaintiff from recovering a judgment.

A. Esterly has sued the Pennsylvania company for $1,230, damages to his orchard by fire started by a spark from a passing engine.

J. R. Hay wants a divorce from his wife, Clyde Hay.

The commissioners will meet with the commissioners of Mahoning to settle bridge matters, tonight.

MRS. ENOCH ELDEN

Passed Peacefully Away After a Long Illness.

Mrs. Mary Elden, wife of Enoch Elden, died this morning at 8 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Aten, Jethro street, after a lingering illness, aged 30 years.

Deceased has been ill with consumption for a year, and last year she was taken to Tennessee and later to Colorado by her husband, where they spent seven months in the hope that her life might be prolonged. She was not benefited to any extent by the trip, and returned home a short time ago to spend her remaining days on earth. Her husband and two children are left to mourn her loss.

She was beloved and respected by all who knew her, and was the sunshine of her home. She was an earnest, consistent member of the First Presbyterian church. The funeral will take place from the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Dr. John Lloyd Lee officiating. Interment at Riverview.

John Bracelin died last evening at the home of his mother in Sixth street, after a short illness with typhoid pneumonia, aged 23 years. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock from St. Aloysius church. Interment will be made at Summitville.

A GAS LEAK BLAZING

When Collin Kinsey Entered the Ohio Valley Office.

SMOTHERED IT WITH A COAT

And Prevented What Would Doubtless Have Been a Costly Fire—The Telephone Booth Was Burning at Four O'Clock This Morning.

What might have been a disastrous fire was prevented by Collin Kinsey at an early hour this morning.

At 4 o'clock he entered the office of the Ohio Valley Gas company and found the telephone booth in flames. Escaping gas from a pipe had been fired by a light near by, and was making good headway when the watchman discovered the blaze.

Kinsey quickly caught up an overcoat that happened to be near, and throwing it over the leak, smothered the flames. In a short time the blaze was extinguished and the danger at an end. Had the watchman not made the discovery it is probable the handsome block would have been seriously damaged, if not destroyed, for there are very few people on the streets at that hour.

LOST THE FIRST CASE.

Braunberg Must Not Exhibit Those Pictures.

Max Braunberg, the McKeesport photographer whose troubles have been a matter of interest to people residing in this place, lost the equity suit filed against him by the Misses Trees. They objected to him exhibiting their pictures.

Judge Collier, who passed on the case says: "It is clear that under the foregoing facts as found the exhibition on the public street of the photographs of the young ladies, plaintiffs, against their protest, was a gross violation of their legal rights; and that the defendant must be restrained and enjoined from exhibiting said cabinet photographs or any copies thereof in any manner whatsoever, and from printing copies of said photographs, and from the use of the photos or negatives in any way for that purpose. The costs to be paid by the defendant."

Photographer Braunberg wins one point in the case, he retains the negatives. The plaintiffs want them destroyed, but the court says nothing about that. Neither does the court say anything about the group picture in which Attorney W. A. Dunshee appeared and which they said Braunberg threatened to exhibit.

Samuel Patterson Was Found

The Dreaded Dust From the Mill Where
He Was Employed Found Its Way Into
His System, and After a Long Struggle
He Passed Away.

Samuel Patterson was found dead in
bed at his residence in East End yesterday morning, another victim of the deadly dust at the flint mill.

Mr. Patterson came here a number of years ago from Ohioville, and found
employment at the East End mill. He worked hard, and in a short time began
to feel the effects of the dust. He continued in the position, however, but in
time was compelled to give up his place.
He became very ill, and his friends
knew it was only a matter of time until
he would pass away.

At 3 o'clock yesterday morning some
of the members of his family were called
to his bedside, but he did not appear
worse than usual. His wants were attended to, and they retired. When they arose a few hours later they expected to find their father as usual, but were
horrified to see him lying dead. A physician was called, but the man had been
dead some time.

Deceased was well known. His wife
dropped dead several years ago, but five
children survive him. He was a member of the Second U. P. church, and highly esteemed.

Funeral services will be held at the
late home tomorrow morning at 10
o'clock, and the remains will be taken
to Beaver for interment.

contracts for the new pottery in the near future. The contract for the stone
work will likely be given out in about three weeks. The plant will be in operation about July 1.

Mr. Goodwin said that he expected in the near future to open a stock book,
and it would not be long until others
were associated with him.

WASHINGTON IN WAR

MILITARY DEEDS THAT PROVE HIS BREADTH AND GENIUS.

He knew the Temper of the Revolution—Was the Leader of the People in the Crisis of the Conflict—Never Lost an Army.

Copyright, 1898, by American Press Association.

WASHINGTON the soldier was entirely another being from Washington the patriot, whose noble manners and lofty purposes drew out the reverence of the American people. He was the gentleman in camp and on horseback, of course, but the gentleman with the native nonsense taken out of him by contact with the rough side of life. Like one of the modern blue bloods translated from Oxford or Harvard to the wild scenes of the plains, he had learned before called to the high command to respect men for manhood alone, for physical strength and courage, for loyalty and endurance. Braddock despised the Virginia provincials whom Washington, then a young staff officer, proposed to throw around the ambushed army at Monongahela for a defense. But Washington knew his men and knew the value of bush fighting in that border warfare. He saved the haughty English from total massacre. So, later, the British officers despised the ragged and unmilitary rebels who dared stand before the trained battalions of Europe. Washington had served with British officers and had learned to estimate the prowess of British troops. His faith in the ultimate triumph of the rebels was practical, not sentimental. He won the fight by hard work, not by luck, nor yet by the favor of the gods.

When Virginia was discussing what she should do to assist Boston in her fight with the British, Colonel Washington said, "If need be, I will raise 1,000 men, subsist them at my own expense and march them to the relief of Boston." He had in mind the mountaineers and hunters of the Virginia borders, whom he knew and who knew him. When Patrick Henry uttered before the continental congress the burning appeal ending with the words, "Give me liberty or give me death," Washington stood calmly by, dressed in his uniform of colonel, with his sword buckled on ready to march at the word.

It was a bold hand that the Virginia colonel put to the task of making soldiers out of militia and minutemen. The troops at Cambridge were chiefly New Englanders, who were rebels against all authority as smacking of kingly rule. He gave them to understand that the war was not to be simply a holiday of thrashing the hated redcoats, but a long struggle, where patriotism and loyalty must be tried in the fire. Incompetent and dishonest officers were cashiered, although they had been elected by the men. His firmness and habit of order drew the admiration of the best element, and he found such New Englanders as Stark, the Green mountain ranger; Putnam, the Connecticut farmer and Greene, the studious Rhode Island mechanic, ready to stand by every act for the discipline of the army.

Washington's first campaign, the siege of Boston, was attended with all manner of difficulties. He had to create a navy to cope with British ships, to satisfy the stay at home counselors of the colonies, who, like most stay at homes, were full of fight, and more than once found his plans thwarted by a council of his chief officers upon whom he depended to lead in attacks. Meanwhile the commander was busy with grand strategy. He sent Arnold and Montgomery to Canada, a brilliant move, but one that came to disaster through the untimely death of Montgomery and the wounding of Arnold. At the end of six months, three of them winter months at that, from the time he had an army fit for action Boston was clear of the British for good.

After Boston the points of importance were Philadelphia and New York, both more exposed to naval attacks than Boston, the cradle of the rebellion. The colonies had next to no navy, and Washington entered upon a defensive warfare to keep the British on the coast and prolong the struggle until the enemy was worn out or outside help should come. Bringing the army to New York, Washington yielded nothing without a fight, but at the same time saved his strength for better purposes than the attempt to defend untenable ground. New York was bound to fall to the British, but he saw to it that it was not made a base for operations in the Hudson river valley, which would cut the colonies in two. He fought some lively battles, or skirmishes rather, which raised the hopes of his soldiers and of the colonial people. The rebels could stand before the redcoats one to five and give a good account of themselves. West Point was made a bulwark against British advance up the Hudson.

So far Washington had clung to the defensive in his new field. Next he entered upon a double line of strategy—to hold on to New England while keeping the British from controlling New Jersey and the Delaware river as a new base for cutting the colonies in two. With but 3,000 poorly clad and half starved troops he took position in Pennsylvania behind the Delaware, in December, 1776. General Charles Lee, the second in command, had a larger army in the field, but refused to co-operate with Washington. Congress abandoned Philadelphia and appointed Washington dictator. Lee was captured while sleeping far outside his lines, and these events raised Washington upon a pedestal in the eyes of the soldiers and the people. The military power of the Revolution centered in him. There soon followed the brilliant stroke at Trenton and Princeton. In these affairs he took the greatest chances, and both were nearly lost by the failures of his combinations, the most delicate plans in war. But Washington came out of them victorious by the display of the highest courage. His tactics at Trenton and Princeton, as well as at Brandywine and Germantown in the same field, are open to criticism, but in each case the situation called for action and Washington was forced to risk much upon the fidelity and ability of his generals. The net result of the Trenton and Princeton campaign was to free New Jersey of the British, except the northeast corner, and save Philadelphia for a time.

Washington settled down for the winter at Morristown with only 1,000 long service troops, but when spring opened in 1777 he had an army of 7,000 under able generals. The British divided the attention of the revolutionists by moving on Philadelphia from the Chesapeake bay and from Canada down Lake Champlain toward Albany. For defense of the north Washington sent Daniel Morgan and his Virginia riflemen to Albany and appealed to the New York and New England patriots to arise and meet the invader. With his own army he kept Howe occupied around Philadelphia, although he lost the battle of Brandywine and Germantown. After the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga he asked for the continental troops serving with the army there under Gates to come to his aid in securing the forts on the Delaware, and thus cut Howe off from direct communications with the sea. They were not sent, and the Delaware line was lost. Washington went into camp at Valley Forge. He had been the victim of a base conspiracy to undermine his power, but kept up his own spirit and that of his men during that trying time by looking for aid from France. Lafayette had joined him at Philadelphia, and during the winter the treaty of alliance was signed.

Early in the spring General Howe resigned the British command at Philadelphia, and his successor, Clinton, evacuated the city, taking the army to New York. Seeing a chance to cripple the British on the march, Washington planned an attack at Monmouth and was robbed of a brilliant victory by the

treachery of Charles Lee, who had returned from captivity to his command. In that battle Washington displayed again the qualities of a fighting general. Like Napoleon, he dashed to the front to cheer on and direct his men. At the same time he did not give way to battle frenzy, although he lost his temper over the contemptible conduct of Lee. Lafayette proved a hero, boy that he was.

While the alliance with France came in good time to cheer on the revolutionists, it increased the difficulties of the commander in chief. Without the French navy there was little hope of success, but the French admirals had their own views of the plan of action. Furthermore, the revolutionists expected too much of the French, and another task was laid upon Washington's shoulders—to keep his people to their work. Besides planning campaigns he was forced to do the work of a national leader, a leader bearing upon his sword the fate of the country. The campaigns undertaken by the French were failures, and the British gained territory on the coast. Finally Washington asked Lafayette to go to France and secure a fleet and an army which should be under his own direction. It arrived at Newport in the summer of 1780, and while Washington was there conferring with the French leaders Arnold plotted the base treason which was to give his commander another cruel blow. He had trusted the brilliant soldier of Quebec and Saratoga and given him that opportunity to betray the citadel of the Hudson valley.

But the nerve of the warrior leader was not to be shaken now that the hour had come for a decisive blow. The troops of Rochambeau united with the continental forces gave him for the first time in the war an army. The fleet also gave the needed sea power to attack where the British were strongest, along the coast. The main British army was in the south under Cornwallis. Washington sent Greene to the south with orders not to fight for positions, but to draw Cornwallis northward. Morgan was also in the south with his Virginians. Both these brilliant soldiers, the mountaineer and the blacksmith, had been driven from the service by the ingratitude of congress, but Washington's appeal caused them to buckle on their swords for the last cast. Lafayette was sent to Virginia with an army, and after many a useless chase Cornwallis retired to the seaboard at Yorktown.

Washington left strong garrisons on the Hudson, and with about 7,000 soldiers threatened to attack New York. He hovered within striking distance, gradually moving southward, and reaching New Brunswick made a forced march to the head of the Chesapeake. By water the army was transported to the York, and with the aid of the French fleet and the troops on shipboard the allies laid siege to Yorktown. They outnumbered the British, and re-enforcements for Cornwallis were cut off by the French ships. Yorktown fell, a triumph of strategy. Washington struck the enemy where he was weak with the most men, but it was only by the most skillful planning that he caught his enemy in position favorable for the blow.

near the seaboard preserving an open road between the Hudson and the south. He was always within reach of the Hudson and of Maryland and Virginia. His army at its best was never the equal of the British in numbers had they been brought into action. Often they had 20,000 to 30,000 in New York, while Washington stood ward outside with less than 5,000.

To compare Washington with the great generals of modern times would be unjust to him. He hadn't the army for great battles. He waged a long and tedious warfare for national existence, and although rarely victorious he was never driven to the wall. He was a pioneer soldier, leading motley and temporary bands of pioneers against an old and strong military power.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

Washington at Forty-three.

George Washington was 43 when he drew his sword under the historic elm at Cambridge as "captain general and commander in chief" of the colonial forces. He was just the age of Julius Caesar when he took command of the army in Gaul, of Napoleon when he made the mistake of his life and started in to conquer Russia, and he was ten years older than Alexander when he wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. Charlemagne was just his age when he overcame Wittkind, the Saxon chief, and made all Germany Christian, and the "captain general of the continentals" was just as old as was Constantine when he determined to make himself master of the world. He was as old as Sesostris, the pharaoh, when he conquered the Hittites and persecuted the children of Israel; as Hannibal when he gave up the hope of conquering Rome and left Italy to defend Carthage against Scipio.

Washington's Room.

Silent we stand beside the open door,
And all the room beyond is bathed in light—
The golden sunlight thou didst hail of yore,
Thou smile that kissed away the tears of night
And in its touch God's daily promise bore
A benediction that put care to flight
And gave thee strength to face the world—aye,
more,
That lit thy pathway, guiding thee aright.
How many dawns thou didst to care awake,
Each dawn attended with new hopes and fears;
Forever faithful didst thy burden take,
Praying that peace might bless the unborn years,
And for thy country and thy kindred's sake
Toiled with a patience that all earth reveres!
How many nights thy heart did well nigh break
To know thy motherland was drenched with tears!
And it was here thou didst at last find rest—
The work was done, the time had come to sleep—
The high, the humble, prosperous, oppressed,
One in their sorrow o'er thy couch did weep.
Our ceaseless gratitude by tongues professed,
But in our hearts there lieth still more deep
A love which with our deeds we would attest
To prove us worthy of the trust we keep.
—Ruth Lawrence in "Colonial Verses."

A Washington and Jefferson Anecdote.

Sir John Macdonald, the first prime minister of Canada, was fond of relating this story to illustrate the need of an upper house:

"Of what use is the senate?" asked Jefferson as he stood before the fire with a cup of tea in his hand, pouring the tea into the saucer.
"You have answered your own question," replied Washington.
"What do you mean?"
"Why do you pour that tea into the saucer?"
"To cool it."

Power in Portrayal.

"Why, man, I've had whole audiences fall to their knees in terror at my description of the day of judgment."
The other exhorter smiled pityingly.
"Ah, yes!" he replied. "But the other night I portrayed the destruction of the world with such power that a man came up after the services and asked me whom he should see about the kinetoscope rights."—Detroit Journal.

Economical.

"A good many people," said the philosopher, "are economical after the manner of a man I once knew, who smoked 30 cent cigars and saved the half burned matches to kindle the fires."

HE WAS A BORN LEADER.

"Washington had the stuff in him, and the kind of mind that enable a man to govern and influence other men," said General William O. Butler, a son of one of the four famous "fighting Butlers" of the Revolution, himself a major general in the Mexican war and a candidate for the vice presidency who barely missed being elected. "My father knew General Washington as intimately as did any of his staff," said General Butler in 1865.

"He always said that General Washington possessed more of the qualities that go to make up a great man than any of the leading figures of the Revolution. Greene came next to Washington, he thought, in force and ability. No other man could have done what he did. Modern historians have but little idea of the difficulties Washington experienced. Outside of his position as general in chief there were so many things to worry and annoy him. The chief military trouble was with his own intimate friends, relating to questions of rank. Especially difficult was General Washington's position when Lafayette came to our aid, and congress, as you know, made him a major general at once. This action greatly offended the older officers, hot headed fellows, sturdy, dashing fighters—generals of brigades, and colonels who had made the continental line what it was—and yet they had to take their orders from a man but 22 years of age, who had never been under fire and was even unable at first to communicate with his officers except through an interpreter."

"In the pacification of these officers General Washington showed the greatest tact," said General Butler. "Yes, gentlemen," he said to them, "it is true that Lafayette is but 22, that he was made a major general by congress upon my recommendation. What else could I do? He brought us 12,000 stand of the best muskets Europe could produce (the French musket of that day weighed 9 pounds, was very carefully made, had a particularly good lock, while the English fire lock weighed 11 pounds, and its lock was clumsy, badly fitted and very prone to miss fire) and 5,000 sabers, 2,000 pairs of military pistols and bits for bridles, and the stirrups and other iron-work for saddles, besides 1,800 cavalry carbines or musketons. Without these arms we could never have equipped our army. Then he brought and caused to be sent to us about $500,000 in gold. It is not too much to say that but for Lafayette's aid just at the time it came our army must have been disbanded for want of equipment and arms."

A Relic of Washington's Time.

At the foot of Ward's heroic statue of Washington on the high steps of the subtreasury building is a broad piece of stone carefully covered with a wire grating. It is so placed that should the image of the immortal Father of His Country come to life and step down from his lofty pedestal he would stand on the same spot where occurred the crowning triumph of his career. Through the protecting grating can be read the following dim inscription, "Standing on this stone, in the balcony of Federal hall, April 30, 1789, George Washington took the oath as first president of the United States of America." When old Federal hall was demolished, the sacred stone was carefully preserved, and it now occupies as nearly as possible the same position as before. Few people have ever noticed it on the high base of the statue, where it is fittingly placed as one of the relics of the nation's birth.

Italy's Young Novelist.

Gabriele d'Annunzio is only 32, but looks older. The features are worn and thoughtful. The Italian playwright believes in his mission, which is in brief the propagation of joy in life. Signor d'Annunzio has been described in consequence of his recent election to the Italian chamber as the deputy for "Beauty." He is about to found a theater at Albano, the object of which is to make that pretty lake town the Baileuth of Italy.—London Chronicle.

Prisoner Tied His Guard to a Buggy.

Not long ago James Morgan, charged with forgery, was arrested at Muncie, Ind., by Deputy Sheriff James of New-castle. While being brought to Muncie Morgan managed to unlock the handcuffs and fastened the deputy to his buggy and then disappeared. Morgan made his escape, and the officers over the country have been looking for him ever since.—Columbus (O.) Post.

The Real Difficulty.

"The trouble with you," said Mr. Ruffedge's wife, after a warm debate, "is that you are a confirmed dyspeptic."
"No, my dear," was the answer.
"That's not correct. The trouble with me is that I am a contradicted dyspeptic."—Washington Star.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Shafar, Lisbon road, a son.

Harry Ashbaugh, of East Palestine, spent Sunday in the city.

The Elks will hold an informal hop at their rooms tomorrow evening.

The hospital committee will hold their regular meeting this evening.

Nancy Hanks was out yesterday repairing the trolley wire at Walker.

George Matheny, of Martin's Ferry, spent Sunday with his family in the city.

All the morning trains were late today. Heavy freight traffic caused the delay.

Jason Smith is confined to his home in Oak street with an attack of typhoid fever.

Mrs. Atwood W. Thomas has issued invitations for next Thursday afternoon.

Clerk Hanley was a Lisbon visitor today. He was there attending to some business.

A six-year-old son of William Smith, of McKinnon's addition, is very ill with typhoid fever.

George Simms, of Second street, will give a stag card party at his home Thursday evening.

Squire J. N. Rose will leave in the morning for Lisbon where he will appear before the grand jury.

The funeral of James Flowers took place yesterday and was largely attended. Interment was made at River-view.

B. Himides, of Racine, Wis., and Edward Himides, of Davenport, Iowa, were in the city today placing some crockery orders.

The gloss kiln hands at the Brunt pottery resumed work this morning. This department has been shut down for almost two months.

The normal class of the First Presbyterian church will meet Wednesday evening, for the purpose of organizing and electing officers.

The women's missionary society of the Second United Presbyterian church will, tomorrow evening, hold a Martha Washington tea in the church.

Mr. and Mrs. William Ripley, of Chicago, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Watson for several days, left at noon for a lengthy stay at Old Point Comfort, Va.

A large show case, filled with fine photographs, was stolen from the Fryett gallery Saturday evening. There is no clue to the thieves. The matter has been reported to the police.

The clerical force of the freight station worked nights during the past week adjusting old records. They were transferred from the old office to the new cupboards and the work was very tedious.

Special services will be commenced this evening at the First U. P. church and continue throughout the week. The pastor, Rev. J. C. Taggart, will be assisted by Rev. H. H. Crawford, of Beaver.

Prof. R. L. Rayman left this morning for Chattanooga, Tenn., where he will attend a meeting of the National School Superintendent's association. He will return to the city the latter part of the week.

The painters that have been at work at the freight depot for some days will be through their work, it is expected, the last part of the week. The receiving sheds have been painted and work has commenced on the outbound platform.

George Turner, aged 74 years, died this morning at his home in Salem. Deceased was the father of Miss Fanny Turner, of this city, who was called to her home last Friday, and was also a brother-in-law of Township Trustee Albright.

A meeting of the Twin City football team has been called for next Thursday evening. Fred Booth and John Stoffel have announced their intention of playing with the local team despite the fact that they were elected officers of the Wellsville team.

BARNETT'S SIGNIFICANT TALK.

gation Will Show That the Forward
Magazine of the Maine Did Not Blow
Up First, if at All, and Was Not the Cause of the Terrible Disaster—Expert
Divers at Work Examining the Wreck.
Naval Officers in Washington, Who
Have Seen Pictures of the Wreck, Said
Great Catastrophe.

HAVANA, Feb. 21.—The naval court
of inquiry appointed to investigate the Maine disaster began its work here to-
day.

Lieutenant Commander Barnett of
the survey boat Bache said to a correspondent:

You want the facts. I can tell you
there are 95 chances out of 100 that in-
magazine of the Maine did not blow up
first, if it exploded at all, and that it
was not the cause of the terrible consequences that followed. The condition of the wreck when first studied and a later
careful scrutiny make this an almost absolute certainty.

No American in Havana doubts now
that the Maine was torn to pieces by a
submarine mine, though the forms and
stating publicly.

Spanish divers will be beside the United States government divers in the
through the courtesy of Captain Sig-
bee. The next question is whether
there will be the return courtesy of permitting the American divers to examine the floor of the bay between the
wreck and the shore for traces of an
fired the mine.

It is generally supposed that a request
for such a privilege will have the immediate effect of putting the government
on its dignity, and that it will be regarded as an insult to Spain.

It is probable that if the mine was
has been pulled in before now, though
left.

Captain Sigbee believes the investigation by his board will be completed in
three days and the results laid before
the court of inquiry.

Havana is delicious with joy. The
carnival has begun.

that as the festival that nearly ap-
proaches an orgy, the masks will be cast
aside, and that there will be an exhibition of the hatred against America.

Circulars exulting in the sinking of
shown Americans in the street is
thin now that it would be but a step to
insult and attack.

and hisses, but a serious anti-American
outbreak is quite within the possibilities of the near future. This feeling is
made more intense by the tidings that
here.

The high class divers also commenced
work today. The ordinary seaman
divers worked about the wreck yester-
day.

The statement relative to high-class
divers is explained as no reflection upon
volunteers, on account of the hazardous
nature of the work, to duty as divers,
in connection with their regular work.
The scope of their work is the exploration of the ship's bottom generally, the
disentanglement of cables from the
propeller shafts and sometimes the
search for a lost torpedo or anchor.
Such work rarely carries them deeper
than 25 feet into the water and it is said
that for operations in deeper water,
such as would be involved in examination of the Maine's bottom, their training has not fitted them.

They are also lacking in that kind of
skill necessary to enable a diver to grope
his way safely through the internal
parts of a mighty ship like the Maine,
torn and dismembered as she is, and
this work is highly dangerous. Creep-
groping for the doors of the numerous
watertight bulkheads which divide the
floors and in perfect darkness requires
the highest expert skill, and that is why
Captain Sigbee with only his sailor
divers at command had not been able
to do much so far toward unraveling
the mystery of the Maine's untimely
end.

WRECKED BY A BOILER.

graphs, Think a Boiler Explosion
bral Not Now a Responsible Critic.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The news-
paper reproductions of photographs
taken of the wreck have been studied
with much interest by the naval officers
here. Great surprise was expressed at
mass of steel and iron heaped in the
forward part of the ship was a particular object of attention. The experts
bursting boiler as the cause of the destruction claim to find strong reinforce-
ment in the pictures for that belief.
thrown up over the boiler space and not
forcing apart of the forward body of
the hull, they say, might have been accomplished by the enormous expansive
power of the high pressure steam carried in these boilers, with their shells
more than an inch thick. As to what
caused a boiler to explode; whether a
or faulty construction, they do not now
undertake to say.

When Secretary Long's attention was called to reports that he had taken official cognizance of the criticisms of the American navy by the Spanish Captain
the state department, with a view of
the state department was the following,
attributed to Captain Sobral:

"It was the result of an explosion
inside of the ship, which took place in
one of the forward magazines. The
fact of the matter is that the discipline
and watch observed on the ship were
very lax. This, as one English news-
paper declared the other day, is the case
on American warships generally. This
occasions on American war vessels."

The secretary said that he had not
called attention to those other features
of Captain Sobral's alleged interview,
in which he refers to the possibilities of
gained while naval attache of the Spanish legation.

As a whole Mr. Long did not treat
the Sobral matter as profoundly serious.

Assistant Secretary Day would not
discuss the Sobral matter. It is understood, however, that the state department does not attach deep significance
to the reported remarks of Sobral,
owing to his minor position. At the
be making such remarks as are attributed to him.

As Secretary Long has called official
attention to them, the department
whether the interview was accurate by
making a request on the Spanish legation. It can be stated positively, however, that reports that the state department made such a request of the Span-
been done thus far, and an unexpected
development so changes the aspect of
the Sobral case that the state department may not feel that it is necessary to
proceed further.

This development was that Captain
Sobral's services as naval attache at Washington were officially terminated
by Spain about four weeks ago. It came from Senor Du Bosque, charge d'affaires
of the Spanish legation, who, when his
ment:

"As regards this reported interview,
I know nothing about it, beyond what I have seen in the papers. I should
imagine Mr. Sobral far too prudent to
say anything calculated to offend brothers in arms. At the same time, I should
state that on Jan. 24 last Captain
Sobral ceased to be a member of this
legation, according to royal decrees,
ant Ramon Carranza y Regura."

Owing to the royal decree relieving
Captain Sobral, it is said, he at present
occupies the position merely of a private
citizen. He is at present in New York,
meeting his old naval friends on the Vizcaya, but his official status as Spain's naval attache to the legation is
was gazetted last month. It is a usual
formality to notify the department of
such a change, but owing to the exciting events of recent days this notifica-
tion of the Spanish decree was not conveyed to the authorities here at the time
it occurred.

THE PURCHASE OF CUBA.

Plan For the Insurgents.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.—The In-
quirer today prints, under a Washing-
ton date, a lengthy dispatch from Robert P. Porter, ex-superintendent of census, giving what he believes to be the
policy of the administration regarding
Cuba. Mr. Porter thinks that Spain
shall be asked to allow the Cubans to
purchase their liberty by the issuance of Cuban bonds, this government to assume the responsibility of collecting the
customs duties and thus see that the
revenues of the government are applied
to the payment of the interest on the
bonds.

Concerning the Maine disaster, Mr.
Porter says there is little doubt that she
was blown up from without, "but it
will be difficult to fasten guilt upon the Spanish authorities."

He confesses that the situation is critical and that the coming week may

DISCIPLINE IS FAR TOO GOOD

C. A. Chute, Who Served Seven Years in
the Navy, Has an Opinion Regarding the
Explain It.

C. A. Chute, superintendent of the mechanical department of the Brunt Porcelain works, does not believe the
man-of-war Maine was blown up by accident, nor does he think that any
breach of discipline on the part of officers or crew was responsible for the disaster.

Mr. Chute served for seven years in the navy, and knows that every man
is never excused, and carelessness on one
of the big machine shops, such as the
battle ships really are, is very rarely
found.

Although Mr. Chute knows the Spanish character he does not attempt to explain the unfortunate happening in
the investigation will not convict American officers and men of carelessness.

MISS GILMORE'S BROTHER

Vizcaya.

Miss Gilmore, who resides at the
home of her relative, Harvey Martin, in East End, was in receipt of pleasant
news last week when she learned that
her brother, Commander Fernando Gil-
more, had been delegated by Admiral Bunce, of the Brooklyn navy yard, to receive the officers of the Spanish man-
of-war Vizcaya when it entered New York harbor.

Commander Gilmore formerly resided
in Steubenville, and since entering the
navy has won for himself a splendid
of persons in this city, and Steubenville
is still proud to claim him as its own.

THE WAR SPIRIT

Has Made Its Appearance in and Near the City.

The war spirit has made its appearance in the city, and even the small
boys have become excited.

The other day a number assembled in
the western part of Sixth street, and
under the leadership of one of their
number fought all kinds of battles with
imaginary Spaniards. In West Market
street a crowd set upon a
companion, and was making it very
warm for him when a lady appeared
and put an end to the conflict. In explanation of their conduct, they said
he was a Spaniard and they were playing war.

"Old St. Clair will maintain the reputation it gained in the early days of the Rebellion should the president call for
troops," said a well known resident of Columbiana to the NEWS REVIEW. "The
people are not unreasonable nor excited,
but they sent a good many brave boys
to the front when Lincoln called on the country, and they will do it again. I
have heard the talk since the news of
the Maine affair came, and I believe a
company could be recruited in a short

COLUMBIANA COUNTY VETERANS.

Tuesday, Feb. 22, at G. A. R. hall,
Wellsville, for the purpose of organiz-

make arrangements for a grand rally in
the near future.

Saturday night a family row occurred
in Third street about 12 o'clock. The
neighbors were awakened by the loud
talking, and heard one man threaten to shoot another if he found him loafing
around his house again.

The wordy war was continued for

Will Be Married Tomorrow.

Levi O. Jones, manager of the decorating department of the Akron China
company, and Miss Lizzie Specht, of
this city, will be united in marriage tomorrow evening at the residence of the

Rev Swift Believes In Christians

The Pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church Believes That the Christian Men and Women of East Liverpool Should Do Heroic Battle In Municipal Government. Jettings From Other Churches.

"Be not deceived: God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Reverend Swift took the above as his topic on Sunday morning and delivered a sermon which went home to the hearts of attentive hearers; a sermon richly freighted with practical Christianity—the Christianity which fits humanity not only for Sunday and church service, but for everyday life and action. The reverend gentleman deprecated the so-called Christianity which spends all its time within narrow church walls, and which fails to come in vital contact and touch with the surging ranks of human life all around and about—the world at large, the members of which so much stand in need of the vitalizing power of the Holy Spirit, as exemplified in human hearts and lives, instrumentalities which the mighty God-Father uses for the accomplishment of his purposes. Reverend Swift believes that the true Christian men and women of this city and of the nation should be deeply interested in good government and the enforcement of the laws and ordinances. He believes that good and true men should not only be in politics, but of politics; battling for the right and the true and compelling the retirement of the false and the evil. East Liverpool sadly needs a concentration of such thoughts and ideas as the pastor of the Methodist Protestant church yesterday enunciated; and out of such concentration of thought must come concentration and unity of action, in favor of clean and good government. Bad and wicked men are in the minority in East Liverpool; but they have been controlling municipal affairs and ruling the majority of the better class of voters and citizens, simply because they are UNITED in their base work, and because the better class are DISUNITED, and therefore become the victims of the law-breaking and law-defying class. Christian men must awaken to the fact that cause and effect are just as sure as death. If good men fail to unite and plant the seed of good government, then, as truly as God reigns and rules, the rising generation will gather the harvest of outraged law, and garner sin, shame depravity and death—death for time and for eternity. "Be not deceived: God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Second M. E. Church.

The wonderful revival services that have been conducted at the Second M. E. church have been brought to a close. Communion services were observed yesterday, Doctor Jackson, presiding elder, being present.

First Presbyterian.

In spite of the weather the usual large congregation assembled at the First Presbyterian church last night to hear Doctor Lee tell the story of a hymn. "Let the Lower Lights be Burning," was the composition in question. The gentleman delivered a strong sermon from the subject, "A Death Scene Repentance."

Christian Church.

The Knights of Pythias attended the Christian church yesterday morning as an organization. Reverend Pike, for his subject took the motto of the organization, "friendship, charity and benevolence," and delivered a splendid sermon, pointing out the possibilities for good when a great body of men were bound together under these principles. Two persons were admitted to membership by letter.

In Other Churches.

Reverend Weary preached to an interested congregation at St. Stephen's Episcopal church. The talk on "Hypocrisy" at the after meeting in the evening was especially good.

Doctor Taggart preached to a large congregation at the First U. P. church yesterday morning, and in the evening the pulpit was occupied by Mr. Martin, of the Allegheny seminary. The gentleman took for his subject "Made Perfect Through Suffering," and delivered an excellent address.

During Lent, services will be held each Wednesday and Friday evening at St. Aloysius church. Ash Wednesday will be observed as usual and the blessing of the ashes will take place in the morning.

Lenten services will be held next Wednesday evening in the Lutheran church at 7:30 o'clock, and on each Wednesday at that hour during Lent.

Reverend Stewart of Stewart's station, occupied the pulpit at the Second U. P. church yesterday.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., MONDAY, FEB 21.

If this government simply shows to Spain that it will not be bulldozed, the Spanish ministry will change its policy.

TOMORROW being a legal holiday there will be no issue of the NEWS REVIEW. Read Wednesday evening's paper for all the news.

THERE must be some solution for the contract prison labor question which will put an end to further controversy. While it is true that statesmen have wrestled with the matter in vain, and all remedies proposed have failed to answer the purpose, there is certainly a happy medium patiently waiting a discoverer.

NOTHING official in the Maine matter will be known until the board has had ample time for investigation. If it was an accident the responsible parties will be courtmartialed, and if it was design Spain will be called upon to pay the bill presented by this government. Thus will the catastrophe be kept constantly before the people until it is settled.

In marked contrast to the silence of Americans in official position, regarding the sinking of the Maine, are the bitter words of Commander Sobral, an attache of the Spanish legation. He scoffs at the idea of war, and poorly conceals the contempt he feels for the American navy, declaring that carelessness, and carelessness alone, is responsible for the awful happening.

It is gratifying to note that the song birds of Ohio are not to be given over to the pot hunter. The legislature refused the other day to pass a bill protecting them, but it has developed that they are to be included in the bill now being prepared by the game and fish commission, and will be attended to when that comes before the house. Birds look well on ladies' hats, but they look much better in the woods.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The celebration of the day which gave to the world the beautiful character of George Washington cannot but be a lesson in patriotism for old and young alike. Particularly can this be said of a time, when the sullen growlings of the dogs of war, have roused the American people to a full realization of the fact that the day may not be far distant when the nation will need many men to emulate the splendid example so nobly given by the father of his country.

THE CURFEW LAW.

The parties who are responsible for the enforcement of the laws and ordinances enacted by the council of this city, should be called upon to explain why the curfew measure has always been a dead letter. They should be compelled to give some reason for the manner in which it has been ignored by every policeman on the force.

The law was only passed after a severe struggle. Much influence was brought to bear upon members of council. That influence was not used as a joke. The parties who interested themselves in behalf of the children of this city did not do it with the expectation of living to see the result of their efforts made the laughing stock of every policeman in the pay of the town. They wanted to see the children cared for. They still want to see the city do its duty, and they are anxious to know why that is not done when the law specifically states that it shall be done.

Board of Trade Is Working on a Plan.

MR. JOHNSON WILLING TO SELL

The board of trade is not winding up its business now that it has landed a few factories. Its next move will be the establishing of a free ferry or the leasing of the one now in operation from Watson Johnson. A proposition has been made to Mr. Johnson, who is in Florida, but no answer has yet been received.

The board argues that the ferry service is very poor, and many Virginia people go to Liverpool and cross the bridge rather than suffer the annoyance of waiting. If the ferry is built, the service must be improved. Some definite announcement is expected very soon.

The Barnstormers.

"The Barnstormers" met in the council chamber Saturday night, and decided on the following cast for "The Mikado" which they expect to produce soon for the benefit of the base ball association.
Mikado.....Elmer Thayer
Nanki Poo.....Frank Kelley
Poo Bah.....Julius Goetz
Pish Lush.....James McQueen
Koko.....John Perkins
Peep Boo.....Mrs. W. F. Lones
Pitti Sing.....Miss Grace Parke
Katisha.....Mrs. C. B. Malone
A decidedly strong chorus of twenty voices was also secured. Although some trouble has been experienced in procuring a room with a piano, they hope to begin rehearsing this week. The fire department has already expressed their desire to have the next benefit, so "The Barnstormers" will no doubt be in great demand when they are thoroughly started and should have the hearty support of the progressive and amusement loving public.

Shop Notes.

Engine 603 was turned out today after receiving general repairs.
M. Gloss, who has been unable to work because of an accident to his hand, is again able to resume his duties.
John Turner, who has been ill, was able to return to work today.
Brakeman C. Johnson is on the sick list.
The shops will be closed tomorrow because of Washington's birthday.
After waiting for some time for material for repairs, engine 643 will today be placed in service on train 121.
Superintendent Scriven and staff will leave Euclid avenue tomorrow on an inspection trip.
C. W. Hall, of Ft. Wayne, has been appointed assistant foreman at the shops, and assumed his duties today.
Will Fulton stopped over a short time Saturday with friends, on his way to Steubenville, where he spent Sunday, returning on this morning's train to his home in Allegheny, Pa.
Miss Dottie Noragon, who has been ill, is better.

When the Police Stepped In and Stopped It.

The police raided a poker joint in Market street Saturday night, and nine gamblers paid the mayor for their fun.

The raid was made by Officers Jennings and Finley, and the clocks has just sounded midnight when they entered a room above the Chinese laundry. Four men were at a table playing, and a number of others stood near. The officers informed them they were wanted, but three had slipped from the room before they could be rounded up and marched away.

At city hall they registered as Samuel Stone, Wellsville; Jake Swan, Calcutta; W. J. Miller, Smith's Ferry; John Stockman, N. Y.; W. Henderson, Rochester; L. Wimple, Joseph Linkerstein, J. Davis, J. S. Daugherty, city. Each was fined $6.60, and after paying was allowed to go. The names of those who got away are known, and they will be arrested as soon as found.

Mayor Gilbert had four offenders before him yesterday morning when the hearings were held, and as all paid or made arrangements to pay the city made $26.40.

The first to be heard was T. W. Thomas, of Wellsville. He was arrested in the Diamond by Officer Jennings for being drunk and disorderly. He was taken to jail in the patrol, and was fined $6.60 for his fun.

The next was Will Seevers, of Chester. Will was drunk, and when seen in West Market street by Officer Jennings was told to go home. He began to tell the officer he knew his business, and what he expected to do, but he had not told his tale of woe when the patrol was on the scene, and another $6.60 was collected.

Robert Brown was drunk, and was fighting in Second street when Chief Johnson came along. He was placed under arrest and at the hearing was asked for $6.60.

The third run of the patrol was when Officer Woods captured George Parish in Broadway. George was very drunk and was taxed $6.60.

Several police calls were answered by the firemen Saturday evening, but no arrests resulted from any of them. Several crowds were dispersed, and a gang of boys in Sixth street were moved.

A PLANT TO BE PROUD OF

The News Review Plant, Main Office and Job Department, in Splendid Shape—We Turn Out Fine Job Work, Equal to Any in the Land—Warm Commendation From the Right Source.

We never attempt to deceive the public. In the first place, such conduct is not honorable. In the next place, we believe firmly in the adage that "honesty is the best of policy." It will win in the long run. This is just as surely a fact as that "effect follows cause." When we tell you we have a "Pony Century Campbell Press," unsurpassed by any press in the land, we mean just what we say and believe, and the manufacturers of this press will back up the assertion, while thousands of delighted purchasers and users of the "Pony Century" will back the manufacturers up in their statement. When we assert that we own and operate a "perfecting press," just on the market, just invented, and a world beater, you can back up our assertion in every honorable manner, and you can be very certain that we will not invest in second hand goods, as such investments are ever and always to be avoided, if possible, and no wise business man, with money back of him, will attempt to compete against first-class equipment by and through an investment in second class material, which is dear at any price.

"Say, old man, that job work you turned out for us fills the bill. I'm more than pleased with it. I gave some work to the other office in town, and I'm sorry that I did it. In comparison with the work turned out for us by the NEWS REVIEW, the other work is simply botched up and unworthy of mention."

And if this testimonial is not strong enough, business men and manufacturers of East Liverpool, read the following respecting price lists, embossed work, and fine products turned out in the job department of the NEWS REVIEW. Our authority is one of the heaviest manufacturing potters in the city of East Liverpool:

"Captain Palmer, you are turning out splendid work for us. That is the best work we have had done in the printing line. You can say anything within the bounds of reason respecting its excellency, and attach my name to the commendation. Another feature is very satisfactory, and that is that your prices are very reasonable, and we have paid much higher prices for inferior work."

And then read this, oh ye business men and advertisers of East Liverpool, coming from the lips of one of the best judges in the country, a man whose business carries him all over the United States, and who inspected minutely every printing office in this city. And, for fear our would-be rivals will assert that we are blowing our bugle too strongly, and that we may not be keeping strictly within the line of facts, we will state that one of the most reliable and trustworthy business men of East Liverpool accompanied the stranger on his inspection of the NEWS REVIEW plant, and distinctly heard the words of commendation as follows:

"My dear sir, you have an elegant plant, and you have it in splendid condition. You are in much better shape than are your competitors. You are far in advance of the requirements of your city. I have traveled for years throughout Uncle Sam's domain, and I have inspected thousands of printing offices, and I can truthfully say that I have never yet found a printing office in better condition than is yours. Don't consider me a flatterer, sir, as I am stating

The manager of the NEWS REVIEW naturally felt proud over such glowing words of approval from such a source, and he is doing all he can to deserve them, and to deserve the good opinion and confidence of the citizens and business men of East Liverpool. We have splendid workmen in every department, sober, reliable, trustworthy and skillful; we have splendid presses, the best manufactured; we have thousands of dollars worth of the very latest and best approved type materials; we are constantly adding to our equipment, and we propose in the future, as in the past, to hold the lead in our craft in this splendid little city.

We have the exclusive right to the American Press association news in East Liverpool, and no rival can take this from us. We are in daily and hourly communication with New York city, and we receive any important telegraphic news or happenings occurring in this great nation, or in the civilized world, up to the hour of 4 o'clock p. m., each and every day in the year. We lead—our rivals follow. This is not bluster or bluff, but a plain statement of existing facts, and the solid truth contained therein maketh our local would-be rivals wince and growl in impotent wrath. Finally, oh ye advertisers, the DAILY NEWS REVIEW caters to the merchants of East Liverpool in preference to any other business men in the land, receives splendid patronage, and returns warm thanks to the men who appreciate such action on our part. ## STRIKE AT THE SPECIALTY.

There is trouble at the Specialty glass works, and today at noon all the employees quit work. They will hold a meeting this evening. Few of the men will talk.

The statement made at the office is that Manager Gleis gave Henry Nanninger, a presser, a week's notice, and his time was up Saturday night. This was followed at noon today by the strike.

The men have a different story. There has been friction since the new manager came, and it is claimed on one occasion that he was involved in a personal encounter with an employee.

The discharge of Nanninger was followed by a meeting, and the factory committee called on the manager and asked a reason for his action. He gave none, and the men decided to quit. One of them stated today that this looked like the first move toward getting rid of the union men employed at the factory.

Manager Gleis was seen by a reporter but refused to talk.

Endorsing Officers.

Tyographical union will meet this evening for the purpose of endorsing international officers to be elected in May. There are a large number of candidates for each office, and the five receiving the largest number of endorsements will be placed on the ticket.

SHERIFF GILL IS AFTER THEM

LISBON, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Burglars on Saturday night entered a small building in Clarkson and stole furs to the value of $150. Sherman Pope, the owner, reported the matter to Sheriff Gill, Sunday morning, and he left at once for Clarkson with the bloodhounds. When he arrived there he found the weather would not permit him to use them. It is believed that something will develop soon.

IN COURT.

Common Pleas Convened on Time This Morning.

LISBON, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Common pleas court convened this morning, and the case of M. H. Hersha against the Liverpool street railway was dismissed for lack of prosecution, at the cost of the plaintiff.

The grand jury got down to work this morning, and the court house corridors are filled with witnesses. Many cases will be considered.

BRIDGE MATTER AGAIN.

A Motion Was Made to Take It to Another Court.

LISBON, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—A motion was made in court today to remove the case of the First National bank against John Shrader to the United States court, the claim being made that the parties are from different states.

W. C. Moore has sued Mary A. Barrett, of St. Clair township, to set aside a transfer of real estate alleged to have been made to prevent plaintiff from recovering a judgment.

A. Esterly has sued the Pennsylvania company for $1,230, damages to his orchard by fire started by a spark from a passing engine.

J. R. Hay wants a divorce from his wife, Clyde Hay.

The commissioners will meet with the commissioners of Mahoning to settle bridge matters, tonight.

MRS. ENOCH ELDEN

Mrs. Mary Elden, wife of Enoch Elden, died this morning at 8 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Aten, Jethro street, after a lingering illness, aged 30 years.

Deceased has been ill with consumption for a year, and last year she was taken to Tennessee and later to Colorado by her husband, where they spent seven months in the hope that her life might be prolonged. She was not benefited to any extent by the trip, and returned home a short time ago to spend her remaining days on earth. Her husband and two children are left to mourn her loss.

She was beloved and respected by all who knew her, and was the sunshine of her home. She was an earnest, consistent member of the First Presbyterian church. The funeral will take place from the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Dr. John Lloyd Lee officiating. Interment at Riverview.

John Bracelin died last evening at the home of his mother in Sixth street, after a short illness with typhoid pneumonia, aged 23 years. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock from St. Aloysius church. Interment will be made at Summitville.

William Weary, who lives in a small shanty near the flint mill, will be sent to the infirmary. He has been living on garbage dumped over the river bank. The Humane society will not permit this and Weary William agreed to walk to the infirmary in the morning provided his partner, James Lane, who has apartments at Walker, would go with him.

Mrs. Love called at the office of the trustees this morning for an order, but was told that the trustees would send herself and husband to the infirmary, but would give her no more orders. She shed tears and departed, saying that she had lived here 33 years and would not go to the infirmary.

Joseph Lannahan was not sent away today as his pulse was 130 and his feet were swollen. Director Jones, of Girard, was notified, and informed that the man should be cared for at least another month.

A GAS LEAK BLAZING

SMOTHERED IT WITH A COAT

And Prevented What Would Doubtless Have Been a Costly Fire—The Telephone Booth Was Burning at Four O'Clock This Morning.

What might have been a disastrous fire was prevented by Collin Kinsey at an early hour this morning.

At 4 o'clock he entered the office of the Ohio Valley Gas company and found the telephone booth in flames. Escaping gas from a pipe had been fired by a light near by, and was making good headway when the watchman discovered the blaze.

Kinsey quickly caught up an overcoat that happened to be near, and throwing it over the leak, smothered the flames. In a short time the blaze was extinguished and the danger at an end. Had the watchman not made the discovery it is probable the handsome block would have been seriously damaged, if not destroyed, for there are very few people on the streets at that hour.

LOST THE FIRST CASE.

Braunberg Must Not Exhibit Those Pictures.

Max Braunberg, the McKeesport photographer whose troubles have been a matter of interest to people residing in this place, lost the equity suit filed against him by the Misses Trees. They objected to him exhibiting their pictures.

Judge Collier, who passed on the case says: "It is clear that under the foregoing facts as found the exhibition on the public street of the photographs of the young ladies, plaintiffs, against their protest, was a gross violation of their legal rights; and that the defendant must be restrained and enjoined from exhibiting said cabinet photographs or any copies thereof in any manner whatsoever, and from printing copies of said photographs, and from the use of the photos or negatives in any way for that purpose. The costs to be paid by the defendant."

Photographer Braunberg wins one point in the case, he retains the negatives. The plaintiffs want them destroyed, but the court says nothing about that. Neither does the court say anything about the group picture in which Attorney W. A. Dunshee appeared and which they said Braunberg threatened to exhibit.

Samuel Patterson Was Found

He Was Employed Found Its Way Into
His System, and After a Long Struggle
He Passed Away.

Samuel Patterson was found dead in
bed at his residence in East End yesterday morning, another victim of the
deadly dust at the flint mill.

Mr. Patterson came here a number of
years ago from Ohioville, and found
employment at the East End mill. He worked hard, and in a short time began
to feel the effects of the dust. He continued in the position, however, but in
time was compelled to give up his place.
He became very ill, and his friends
knew it was only a matter of time until
he would pass away.

At 3 o'clock yesterday morning some
of the members of his family were called
to his bedside, but he did not appear
worse than usual. His wants were attended to, and they retired. When they
arose a few hours later they expected to
find their father as usual, but were
horrified to see him lying dead. A physician was called, but the man had been
dead some time.

Deceased was well known. His wife
dropped dead several years ago, but five
children survive him. He was a member of the Second U. P. church, and
highly esteemed.

Funeral services will be held at the
late home tomorrow morning at 10
o'clock, and the remains will be taken

PUBLIC SALE.

All Farmers and Stockmen Will Make Note.

All those who are especially interested will make note that Mr. John E.
Goddard, the well-known and justly popular breeder and raiser of fine stock,
will sell, at public sale, on the Spring Grove Stock Farm, one mile west of East Liverpool, on the Spring Grove road, a superb lot of blooded horses,
mules, cattle and hogs, and a desirable
lot of farming implements and household furniture. This is a golden opportunity of securing first-class bargains.
For full particulars as to terms of sale,
etc., address Box 381, East Liverpool, Ohio. Sale will take place on March 8 and 9.

Mr. Goddard will take charge of the Belle Vernon Stock Farm, near Cleveland. His many friends wish him full success in his new venture.

INCORPORATED HIS COMPANY.

John S. Goodwin Expects to Let Contracts
In Three Weeks.

The John S. Goodwin Porcelain company, with a capital stock of $75,000, has been chartered, and Mr. Goodwin stated
this morning that he expected to let the
contracts for the new pottery in the
near future. The contract for the stone
work will likely be given out in about
three weeks. The plant will be in operation about July 1.

Mr. Goodwin said that he expected in
the near future to open a stock book,
and it would not be long until others
were associated with him.

A BLACK CLOUD

Attracted Much Attention In the City Yesterday.

Soon after the churches had poured their congregations into the streets yesterday, an unusual stir was created by a great black cloud which came up behind the Virginia hills, and, spreading across the sky, almost shut out what little light had been struggling down to earth.

The cloud was in view for full five minutes, and then disappeared to the north, being blown by a high wind.

On the River.

General rains up the river has caused a rise in the Ohio. Within an hour yesterday the river raised over a foot,
and the marks registered at the wharf
at noon today 13.6 feet and still rising.
An 18-foot stage may be reached by tomorrow night.

The high water will not affect the southern coal market. There is but little coal to be sent south, as most all that in the upper pools has been sent out.

All the Sunday boats got up, but they were behind time.

Passed down—Henry Brown, Tornado
and Enterprise.

Passed up—Keystone State, Kanawha,
